[a setting with a lot of moving parts, characters appealing enough that you'd like to see what happens to them, and action sequences in big interesting set pieces (hide spoiler)]

Leila Anani says

An improvement on the last volume in the series, this installment picks up where the last one left off: Swordswoman Corsan settled at the Hare with her brawny lover Steifann and Nyc enjoying herself at her family vineyard. The pair unite once more as Corsan is summoned to become Nyc's bodyguard when she returns to her war-torn city of Rhostshal. She makes herself increasingly unpopular, but setting herself up as ruler and claiming the only way to make peace is for her sister to marry her sworn enemy.

A fun romp, although having all the characters bisexual does seem to be a bit of a cop out. I did like the confrontation between Nyc and Steifann, even if it was far too brief.
