Delanie Washburn says

I have always struggled with assurance, often looking at my sinfulness and how far I am from being perfect and sinless. This book is for believers in Jesus Christ, and it helped me realize that my assurance comes not from my own perfection or my own emotional experience, but from Christ, God alone. His words are true and will always be true. One of the most powerful examples Ironside gives in the book (spoiler? I guess?) is when he compares the Christian with the Jew hiding inside the house during the first passover. He writes that the reader should imagine a boy fearful and trembling, afraid he will not be saved because he is the first born and they have been doomed to die at the hands of the angel of death. Ironside goes on to say, that despite his fear and he is safe because of the blood of the lamb on the front of his door. God said that any door with the blood would be passed over, and it was true. Jesus is that lamb for us, and God passes over and does not punish us with eternal fire and death like we deserve. Jesus is our lamb, and a more perfect lamb, because the blood of animals can't take away sins, but Jesus can and does. The book was timely for me, and a gift from God. Thank You God for that.

Robert says

This book pointed me to look completely outside of myself, to rest in God's satisfaction with Christ's work. Seeing the sin question as being answered completely by God gives one faith.

Eli says

Though I disagreed with Ironside on the method of sanctification, the main point of this book I wholeheartedly agreed with: that Christians may have full assurance of salvation through simple faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Very good!

Kay says

Good book written by a man who was passionate for Jesus Christ. Great gift for believers who may need encouraging, all based on God's Word.
