Darkness Falls Trista Ann Michaels

Even though ghosts are Alana's life, she tends to take a more realistic approach to them, often even debunking paranormal activity. When she's offered the chance to investigate one of the largest and most haunted houses in the country, she and her team jump at the chance. But what starts out as a promising adventure turns dangerous fast. At the center of it all is a set of twins Alana finds herself between. Literally.

Noah and Aiden share a connection that strengthens the second Alana enters their town. Unfortunately, the two don't make that great of a first impression when the connection they share spills over to Alana. Seducing her in the middle of a paranormal investigation, that is proving to be more human than ghostly, is not exactly what the two had in mind. In order to win her over, they'll do whatever they think they have to.

But before anyone can focus on happily ever after, they'll have to decipher the ramblings and clues of a female ghost or Alana's best friend will become the next victim of a very human killer.

Erin says

A 2.5 rounded down. My reaction to this book is conflicted. For the positives, I wasn't tempted to drop it. It definitely wasn't boring and it held my attention, and parts of it were enjoyable and/ or super creepy. I liked that it was a menage-romance-horror. How unique!

However, it has many glaring negatives. The biggest negative for me was that the characters and the relationship were grossly underdeveloped. I really don't know anything about any of the characters. I wasn't invested in them. They had little personality and zero back story. They were really underdeveloped. Worse, I have no clue why the main characters were drawn to each other (besides (not super developed) paranormal reasons). All they really did was yell, nag, and have sex with each other. Sure, we are told they are falling for each other, but there is absolutely no demonstration of that whatsoever. I didn't believe in them as a couple/ trio, and that seems like a pretty epic fail for a romance novel of any stripe. A romance with zero actual romance. Sigh.

Also, Alana's relationship with Tray was super odd. What the fuck is going on with those two? Friends don't do that with friends, and I found them (use your imagination) really gross and just plain unsettling and weird. Finally, there were editing errors that removed me from the story, and smacked of laziness. For example, Aiden and Noah's names were switched.

3.5 stars rounded up. It would be a solid 4 if it weren't for some editing issues.

Alana produces some sort of ghost show and she and her crew come into town to film at the local haunted house. There, she meets Noah and Aiden, twins who share a psychic connection and are only able to fall in love with one woman (together). So, finding that special someone who doesn't mind a threesome with some sexy twins is apparently difficult. I scoff in disbelief, but hey, it's the premise. When she first comes to town, she only meets one twin and doesn't realize there's another. She goes on a date and actually sleeps with one, before meeting the second and she kisses him. Then she realizes they're twins and she thinks they're playing a game. So it takes a bit for her to come around to the fact that they both want her and might actually love her and that they want her to be with both of them. For some reason, she's hesitant.

In all of this, there is a ghost story and mystery suspense which you can pretty much skim through because the relationship is far more interesting. It's sexy, but not particularly plot driven. It is far more erotica than anything else. I enjoyed reading it.

Dark Divas says

I have been awaiting a new novel by Trista Ann Michaels ever since I devoured her previous amazing menage books. I am so happy that I wasn't disappointed. Darkness Falls is a steamy hot encounter with ghosts, a sexy pair of twins, and a heroine that is as modern as they come with a traditional core tucked inside.
