Michael has been Kenny's best friend for as long as he can remember....then a new kid moves to town. A new kid that lives in the most expensive house in town and his parents drive fancy cars. The new boy even gives expensive birthday gifts. How can Michael compete with the new kid? Michael is worried he's going to lose Kenny as a best friend to this fancy newcomer.

This story explores friendship, peer pressure, and how our words and actions can impact our friends. A great lesson for kids everywhere! My son loved the fun illustrations, giggled aloud at silly parts of the story, AND learned some great lessons while reading this story. Win-win!

Thanks to Netgalley and the publisher for the opportunity to read this story.

Gina Catalano says

“There were quite a few concepts and phrases that were sprinkled throughout the book that had Hannah and Jack stop to ask questions. Words like ‘refugee’ and ‘betrothed’ or the concept of freedom in America were all topics beyond comprehension. Whole all great lessons, they are lessons that should be discussed at a much higher reading level - as this book is intended for grades first through fifth, it will be interesting to revisit when they’re at that level.”

#FirstLine ~You're not going to believe THE MESS i got myself into this time.

This book is SO good. I adored it. I loved that it was super funny, but also provides the reader some very valuable lessons about friendships, peer pressure, how people can make quick judgments and assumptions about other people. Also, there are themes about the importance of thinking before you speak and understanding that all words spoken have consequences. A great story for a family read, read aloud or for any child to read to themselves. It is a delight and my boys and I cannot wait to read the other books in the series.
