Marriage, Manhattan Style Barbara Dunlop

721 PARK AVENUE: Penthouse A

TENANTS: Reed and Elizabeth Wellington

SCANDAL: Married for life?

A sexy billionaire husband, a Park Avenue penthouse, money to burn. Elizabeth Wellington had it all, right?

But Reed was married to his corporation and she spent evenings alone --- with her ovulation charts. Her husband still set her body on fire, but Reed was keeping secrets, ones serious enough to rock their life together. Then fate brought them an unexpected bundle of joy. They finally had the baby they'd always wanted ... but had it arrived soon enough?

Someone recommend it to me when I was looking for story about married couple. Oh boy, how I liked it. Though the heroine acted like fool and sometimes said something stupid but I liked her. The hero was a very overprotective loving and caring man, but made a very stupid decision by keeping his wife in the dark. Geez, if he was my husband I'm gonna kicked his ass.

Absolute rubbish.

Once in a while you get a book that you connect with on a level beyond the normal, well-written story. This, for me, was one. Barbara Dunlop is an excellent story-teller. Her descriptives were a joy to read, her imagination a welcome experience and her characters VERY likable. I'd be looking out for her next release

Stories about already married couples trying to work on their marriages are some of my most favorite. This was no different, never mind that the two main protagonists were easily likable and more importantly, very easy to read and connect with. This was a good one.

This marriage-in-trouble story does a pretty good job of showing how infertility can impact a relationship; it's not really deep but less superficial than the usual category, despite a lot of fairy-tale elements. (A nonstory related caution: the information on increasing fertility is outdated.)

I thought Elizabeth was either too timid or spoiled. And seriously, Reed had major control issues. And it was a miracle they'd been married for FIVE years and still didn't know a lot about each other. All in all, it could've used better characters and a way more believable story line.

SPOILER ALERT

The death of Brandon & Heather was too much of a cliché. Had me rolling my eyes at the measures they took to make this story remotely exciting.

“Marriage Manhattan Style” is Barbara Dunlop’s latest Silhouette Desire release and the fourth book in the miniseries ‘Park Avenue Scandals’. Each story limns the tale of a resident of 721 Park Avenue in Manhattan. Other authors participating in this sexy contemporary series are: Maureen Child, Laura Wright, Jennifer Lewis, Emilie Rose and Anna DePaolo.

Elizabeth has everything a gal could want...a fabulously sexy, multi-millionaire husband, an unlimited spending account, and a gorgeous Park Avenue penthouse. What she doesn’t have is a baby and the more they try, the more tense their relationship becomes. When he begins keeping secrets, she begins to suspect the worst.

Reed is head over heels in love with his wife. When they have trouble conceiving, he’s determined to do everything he can to fulfill her dreams. So when trouble rears its ugly head in the form of blackmail and an SEC investigation, he tries to keep it from his wife. He’ll have to learn that marriages with secrets and lies aren’t marriages for long!

Although the concept and plot are hardly new, Dunlop does manage to give this tale an updated look by drawing inspiration from all the recent high finance fiascoes! Elizabeth tends to jump to conclusions, but the author did provide her a sensible best friend to provide a voice of reason. There’s a background secondary romance that provided a bit of comic relief and I’m still giggling at the thought of a bruising bodyguard on diaper duty. Reed easily slips into the character of a man forced to delegate to save his marriage—something every spouse of an overworked mate can relate to. I was especially glad to see Dunlop didn’t try to overwhelm the story with fashion and society name dropping which for some reason always seems to put my back up.

I enjoy reading the shorter category romance stories as a break from longer novels. They only take one and ½ to two hours to read, they always end happy, and they’re much cheaper than a movie! If this sounds good to you, give “Marriage: Manhattan Style” by Barbara Dunlop a try and see if a little New York romance isn’t just what you were looking for.

It was just ok.
