Quick overview of a past erra in Sudan. Describe the places of making home made alcohol Despite the fact that was not acceptable from the society, some of those inside home bars were allowed by the government, other were not legal at all!

For me it was so interesting to read about this part of Sudan history, cause we were not allowed to discuss such the activities in such places, I do not even know if it is still there such activities in the current present of not!

Alcohol in Sudan close related to shame, even if the person who take it is not alcoholic, reading this book made it clear that the reason is more related to the image of the community engage in such activities more than Islamic rules only, though, it is a combination of the two factors.

In the book, it is interesting to know stories about the type of people who are regular visitors of such bars, mostly: uneducated, poor, drink too much, have no life, and big losers in short!

And until today this is the picture the Sudanese society associate with anyone drink alcohol.

Good to have such book to track back our inherited views of things, cause we do not naturally stop to think them through.

But in general the book was so boring, cause has lots of poem in the Sudanese dietetic, I'm more used to read in the formal Arabic, it was hard to understand some words, and I skipped lots of pages.
