Jack Gordon is Ann Arbor's most delectable bachelor. At age thirty-five, he's made millions as a top-selling Ann Arbor real estate broker and has the right connections to close a deal by any means necessary. With his rugged good looks and compelling personality, he has a virtual black book most men would kill for and he uses it often, never settling for one woman for very long.

While his D/s past remains buried, exactly where he wants it, an undercurrent of boredom and dissatisfaction runs through his life now. A disastrous experience years earlier made him swear off the whole scene, but the more Jack suppresses his natural Dom, the more his frustration grows.

Sara Thornton, a rookie in the real estate game, has fast-tracked herself to the top of the Ann Arbor market. Her life reflects a disciplined and focused routine, exactly the way she wants it. However, as her career takes off, the fulfillment she seeks remains inexplicably out of reach. The one thing she knows for sure, she will not join the Jack Gordon groupies in her company, no matter how tempting that might seem.

A chance encounter, then a difficult transaction, throw Jack and Sara together and the sparks fly high and hot and often. Forced to confront the compulsions that gain momentum with each sizzling encounter, their relationship seems to spiral out of control until Jack finally admits what he needs, and shows Sara what she's been missing.

Floor Time, Hot Time, Bed Time, More Time. What we have here is a very up and down relationship between a sexy, arrogant but somewhat tortured Alpha male, Jack and the extremely, beautiful, independent woman, Sara who gets under his skin in every which way. They are both in the real estate business and are very good at what they do with their clients as well as with each other!! The frustration one man can cause Her face flushed with anger, no longer aware of Jack as a desirable man, but as a client-stealing asshole.made me LOL.

Even though Jack frustrates Sara one cannot stay mad too long She shook her head, looked up and there he was – all six foot, four inch, dark hair, blue eyes, sexy white smile, of him.yummy :0) As some time goes by and their personal relationship starts to progress neither one can deny the passion between them and so it begins. Two words to start this heated affair wall sex yep seems to be somewhat popular lately lol as Jack says to her “Don’t turn around,” he whispered. “Let me show you what happens next. Just leave it all to me.” Now would you say no? I think NOT! and then we have our cocky but honest moment with Jack “Um, babe, tuck in your shirt in the back,” Jack whispered. “You look like you just got fucked against the office wall.”well alrighty then. Their relationship is somewhat different in the aspect that they have both been burned as we often see but Jack more so than Sara. Once she starts to fall for Jack there is no stopping her or him. He had to be the absolute worst man she could get attached to – a self-centered, man-whore, intent on his own satisfaction every minute of the day.

The tortured part of Jack has to do with his past as a Dom and ultimately realizes what lies beneath and what he would like to do about it, more importantly with Sara, but will she submit to Jack. “You don’t need any other option baby. I’ve got everything you need.”

I enjoyed this short story very much! It was hot and I loved Sara and Jack. You will find yourself saying, oh no he didn't, referring to jack but at the same time you won't be able to deny his likability. The only thing I didn't like was that a few parts seemed a little rushed which just means Ms. Crowe could have made it longer and it would still have been as enjoyable as it was! I do recommend you read it and I look forward to the next in the series!

I was provided an ARC copy for an honest review from Tri Destiny Publishing.

I'm not completely sure how I came across this book... I know it was on Goodreads, but I can't remember exactly where I saw in since none of the people I am friends with have read it. Anyhow, I read other reader's reviews about the book before I bought it & some compare it to Fifty Shades of Grey. I have only read book 1, so I can't speak with a completely educated tongue as to my feelings about that comparison; however, I will say that so far, I do not see how they compare except for the BDSM & hot sex scenes. Fifty Shades is much more emotional & complicated than what I've read in this series so far. I mean, we're dealing with an egocentric, womanizing, narcissistic jerk who freaks out at the first sign of an emotional connection with a woman. That is a typical guy thing, so not that complicated at all. I'm sure all of us women have been at the receiving end of crap these type of men dish out at one point or another. So my point is that we see this type of stuff everyday. Don't get me wrong, I loved the first book & will definitely read the next one... I couldn't put it down. I would really give it 4.5 stars if I could since I gave Fifty a 5. This is definitely a book that I would recommend if you're looking for something along a similar line to Fifty Shades.

The book was awful. I wasted hours on this book for nothing. I should have stopped at page 40 when I realized it was boring. I felt the author made circles. Jack and Sara could have a solid relationship long before they did. And when I finished it I saw an expect from the second book. And the main characters are Jack and Sara again. Pretty much everything happened in this one. Almost rapes, misunderstandings, client stealing, heartache and much more that made me say no more.

Though I will consider someday to read the next books.

Edit 2.

The day has yet to come and it has been 2 years. Not seeing it happening

To say that I was completely & totally thrilled to get my hands on a copy of this book would be an understatement. Over the past few weeks, I have devoured everything that Liz has written and loved every bit of it. Floor Time is no exception to that and in fact, is my favorite book to date! Liz does a phenomenal job of combining exceptionally written characters with such authentic & real story lines, that you can't help but get sucked in!

Floor Time introduces us to Jack Gordon (oh, how I love this character) & Sarah Thornton, both of whom are realtors working for the same company. When their paths cross, the spark between them is electric and tangible, and what follows is a story of the road two people travel down while trying to create a relationship where the attraction is the easiest part. It's not always sunshine & roses and their journey is tough, but what relationship isn't. You have to work to maintain the love that the instant connection brings - Liz does an amazing job of capturing the realness of that which is one of the reasons I enjoyed the story so much!

Jack's character is just scrumptious! He is the quintessential dominant alpha male not looking for love, or so he thinks. His past haunts him and his relationships with women. The one time that he gave his heart over to love, he had it crushed. He swore that he would never allow himself to be that vulnerable again. If he doesn't feel anything, then he can't be hurt. This makes for a very lonely life for him and he wants to change, he just hasn't met the right person. He needs to dominate and finding that person proves harder than he imagined.

Sarah is fierce! I love her independence & wit. However, she is not without issues. She doesn't trust nor does she allow herself to be close to anyone. Her independence & need to succeed are so strong that it is almost a detriment. Only when she starts seeing Jack and submitting to him, does she see that it gives her the ultimate power, its the ultimate eye-opening experience. It is not without struggle though, and I still don't think she truly believes that it is right. Her independence is so ingrained that she can't see past it.

I won't say their story is magical, because for me that places a Disney-esque factor to it and that is just NOT this story. What is it then - it's raw, emotional, strong, confusing (to them at least), heart-wrenching and completely FANTASTIC! Their love & sex burn the pages and make me want that fabulous ending, since their road has been so tough ;) I have to know the rest of their journey and what the future holds for them.

There was a lot of steamy scenes in this book....but I just could not connect with the characters. Maybe because I was thinking of a different "Jack" while reading. ;) Also, I pretty much couldn't stand Sara. ACT LIKE AN ADULT--SAY NO FOR CRYIN' OUT LOUD! Do you really think Jack is going to change his womanizing ways?! You are a smart woman. So, no I do not feel sorry for you when Jack breaks your heart for the 3rd, 4th, and 5th time. UGH! MAKE UP YOUR MIND ALREADY. Sheesh

I hate giving 1-2 stars but I really didn't care if Sara and Jack worked out or didn't...then the ending sealed the deal for me. ugh...really?! C'mon man. Now, I really hate Jack.

Anyway--everybody isn't always going to love the book they are reading. I just hate I couldn't connect with the characters because once I read the synopsis I knew it was something I had to read.

Lucinda Claire says

Floor Time is book one in the Stewart Realty series by Liz Crowe.

This first installment of the Stewart Realty series introduces us to Jack Gordon and Sara Thornton, both realtors in the premier Stewart Realty Agency. Jack is the golden boy of Stewart Realty, while Sara is a promising new addition to the Stewart family. Still reeling from a hook-up with a co-worker who she later finds out is engaged, Sara swears off relationships, especially with anyone she works with, and she's determined to focus all of her attention on building her career. Unfortunately, the one co-worker she cannot seem avoid is Jack Gordon. The prickling electricity she feels whenever they're in the same room is confusing to the point of distraction.

Thirty-five-year-old Jack Gordon is the epitome of a living, breathing alpha sex god. He oozes sex from every pore of his six-foot, four inch dark frame. With his bright blue eyes and stunning white smile, there is no shortage of women shamelessly throwing themselves at Jack's feet. Sara, however, is not one of them, and she's determined to keep it that way despite the undeniable gravitational pull that seems to suck her in every time their eyes meet.

Author Liz Crowe has created two of the most confusing characters I've read in a very long time. Yes, Jack can be charming, and there is no denying he's sex in a suit, but he's also a man-whore. I want to like him. Sometimes I think I do like him. I definitely don't trust him... well, at least I don't think I do, but I want to. He can be sweet and charming, and in the blink of his bright blue eyes, he becomes sharp tongued, and I want to smack him – or I want Sara to. He can be so self-absorbed and frustratingly cocky that – much like Sara – I found myself vacillating between loving him and being disgusted by him. Poor Sara. I felt sorry for her a little. It's really hard to hold your resolve when the man is literally rocking your world, and there's no doubt Jack takes Sara to the places fantasies are made of. The sex – because it's definitely not "love making," no, no way – is raw, and rough and full of lust for the sheer satisfaction of their physical attraction. Nothing more, but definitely nothing less.

Sara, on the other hand, is her own heart-shaped-box of confusion. There's no doubt Jack can play her body like a finely crafted violin. But outside the bedroom, the two are oil and water. And then they're a perfect blend of sweet and savory. And then they're back to oil and water again. My feelings for them were so confused most of the time, I kept reading just hoping for some resolution for my poor, bewildered mind.

To even hint at whether I got my answers would be unfair. Misery loves company after all. Floor Time kept me up into the wee hours of the morning. There was no way my mind would rest until I had a resolution. Suffice to say, it was a good thing I already had Sweat Equity (book two) in my Kindle queue as the dreaded "The End" appeared. It's been a long time since a story has had my mind in this much of a twist.

Floor Time earns four complicated stars.

The first book in what I'm starting to see is a very popular series among fans, Floor Time by Liz Crowe promises a real love story, complete with conflict, erotic love scenes and a true to life "ending." It's not the first time a book has promised to deliver on a certain level, sometimes they do deliver, but for the most part, they don't deliver on all the promised aspects.

Not to fear readers, Floor Time DOES deliver on its promises. This is only the second book by Liz Crowe that I've read but already I have found that they reach me on an emotional level. I can truly connect, not just identify with the characters in her books.

Jack isn't what you would call typical hero material. To be blunt, he's a man whore. A handsome, intelligent, successful businessman but a man whore none the less. In other words, he's like most males in the world and there's nothing wrong with that because in the real world, no one is sitting around waiting for "Mr or Miss Perfect." My above description may give off the impression that I didn't like Jack. Not so, it was quite the opposite. I loved Jack. Why? Because he NEVER pretended to be anything but what he was. He never lied about his reputation, never led women on in order to get them into bed. He was straight forward that he only wanted sex from them. That's part of what I liked, what made Jack unique to me and kept him from looking like a cad in my eyes.

Sure Jack can and is a jerk at times but we're not looking for perfection here people, we're looking for realism. Jack's not invulnerable to women though. He has an almost immediate connection with Sara even if he doesn't realize it. She messes with his reputation as a womanizer and that was fun to watch. Even the baddest bad boys have weaknesses.

Sara reacts to Jack the way most of us would HOPE to react if a handsome, millionaire playboy started pursuing us. Cool and collected on the outside, an emotional and hormonal wreck on the inside. She's good at her job and doesn't allow much to stand in her way. She's feisty and independent, almost to a fault. I loved that she wanted to have control of her life and when she didn't have that control, it made her nervous. Watching Sara struggle with letting someone else have control once in awhile really made Floor Time work for me. It really brought home the point that it's not always in our best interests to be in control of our lives, that it's okay with letting someone you trust take control. It's not an easy thing to do and Sara struggled with it the entire way.

The chemistry between Jack and Sara is off the charts from the beginning but then again, that's the easy part. It's trying to overcome not only their own pasts but each others' as well. Each was preconditioned to think a certain way and becoming involved with one another is basically screwing with that preconditioned thought process. That's what creates so many obstacles for these two but it also makes their relationship worth fighting for. It's what made me root for them from almost the first page. That hope that these two characters who have so many obstacles to overcome, can somehow make a relationship work.

There is a slight BDSM element to Floor Time but it doesn't deter from the real story. Which I greatly appreciated.

As an after thought, I looked around to see what other opinions people had about Floor Time and I came across one particular opinion a lot: That Floor Time is like Fifty Shades of Grey.

I have to strongly disagree there. Other than the slight BDSM in Floor Time, I didn't see anything remotely close to Fifty Shades. Jack and Sara are more fleshed out, more realistic and less fantasy than Christian and Ana. Sara is nowhere near as foolish, naive and weak as Ana.

I do highly recommend that both fans and non-fans of Fifty Shades pick up Floor Time just so that you can see the differences between the two. If you didn't like Fifty Shades of Grey then please pickup Floor Time so that you don't carry around the idea that all erotic romances are the same.

Floor Time is a passionate, emotional journey between two emotionally handicapped characters that will leave you breathless and eager for the next book in the series. Just like her character Jack Gordon, author Liz Crowe is straight forward. She doesn't sugar coat anything, she tells it like it is. The good, the bad, the ugly and the passionate parts of a relationship.

Add this book to your "To Read" lists, you won't be sorry.

I had never read a book by Liz Crowe but what an amazing job she did with her realtor series! If you haven't read one yet you need to asap. The emotional roller coaster is a wild ride for sure. The dynamic between Jack and Sara are real life and realistic enough that you can put yourself in their shoes. Between the hatred, then lust to hatred again, and never being able to get the other person out of your head is one thing that really happens when you are in a relationship. The fact that Jack is so set in his ways and stubborn to change and that Sara is....well just plain STUBBORN adds to the dynamics tenfold! Then come the twists and turns and you are like WHAT are you DOING. Then things seem to be back on track just in time for you to literally yell at your iphone (kindle app) in my case. Honestly after reading this book in a matter of 2 days I hope that tells you that you won't be putting it down and then you get to keep reading about their hardheadedness in Sweat Equity.....stay tuned for the next review.

3 stars!

Instead of reading Floor Time, I decided to listen to it on audible. The narrator was good. It wasn't a bad book- but it wasn't great for me either. Just one of those 'okay' reads. This is part of a three book series, but in my opinion, it could have ended nicely at the end of this book with a sweet epilogue. I didn't dislike the heroine or hero (even though he made some dumb ass choices), but I just didn't feel that connection to the characters or the story.

Guilty Pleasures Book Reviews says

This review posted on Guilty Pleasures

Everything about this book was a unique and interesting experience for me. For one, I've never read a story about real estate. And two, the hero is a piece of work and a bit of a jerk for most of the book. Normally, those types of males do not appeal to me, but in this case Jack wore me down and I ultimately caved to his charm, and by the end of the book I truly felt he did love Sara but just had some growing up to do to learn how to deal with his feelings. And third, I've never read a book with a happy for now ending and not a happy ever after one. Are any of these factors bad? Heck no. In fact, I positively enjoyed this book, especially the characters, which were appealing and well-developed--and the writing which impressed me from the first page.

I loved Sara's character. She was determined, strong, successful, uninhibited, and very likable. I don't think there was anyone in her office who didn't like her, some were jealous but that was understandable. She had the hottest guy on the planet after her. And, I loved her attitude - she was as cool as a cucumber, almost too cool at times. I even felt myself wanting to nudge or strongly urge her to go to him when they would have a misunderstanding, but unlike me, "the caver", she stood her ground, which is probably why Jack was so in love with her.

And then, there's Jack.....where do I begin with this complex man? The best way I know to describe him is PRESENCE. He commands it just by walking into a room. He gets all the great deals and the women. But, these men who seem to have it all....don't, and he's no exception. He's missing something in his life. He has the looks, clothes, all the material possessions money can buy, respect and success, so what could possibly be missing? Yep, you guessed it. LOVE!

I think Jack and Sara have the potential to be a super couple. They have explosive chemistry and they're sex is off the charts hot. However, I did want more of the BDSM in their relationship. It was obvious Sara wanted it too, but he was never fully able to let go and be his true self because of something that happened in his past. I hope the BDSM aspect is explored more in the next book.

I felt there was a great deal of emotion in this book and when I finished it, I wanted to immediately start the next one in the series. Liz Crowe was a new author to me and I would definitely read other books by her. Her style flows which makes for a great, easy read with really hot sex.

Enjoy Everyone!

Carin says

In Floor Time we have the foundation of the relationship between Jack and Sara, we learn about who they are and what made them that way We learn that Jack is pretty much a man whore and Sara is more concerned about building her career than relationships. Sounds like a volatile coupling and is sure is, the chemistry and the sparks fly.

We also meet the other characters that will play an important roll in the relationship as well, from the new Realtor who looks like a surf god to Sara's brother and his lover the people in Jack and Sara's life sure take tempestuous situations and just makes them worse.

Liz Crowe writes "romance for real life" in her books people are messed up and nothing just magically fixes that, you get to see the struggle and the hard work that her characters go through to fix themselves and to fix their relationships. Ms Crowe also has very realistic depictions of the steamy hot moments between the lovers in her books and all of that combined makes for fantastic reading that reaches in and grabs your heart (and your hormones) and takes them captive on a wild roller coaster ride of lust, love, deception, redemption and I need a cold shower moments.

These are books that you finish in one sitting because you can't put it down. It is a series that as soon as you finish one you want the other sitting right there so you know what happens next.

I received a copy of this book in exchange for a honest review

Cynthia says

I had really been looking forward to reading Liz Crowe's Realtor's series as I had heard so many great things about it. Both the series and the author were completely new to me. The only problem with being told how fantastic a series is, is that you usually set your expectations too high and are then consequently disappointed as it does not live up to them... Luckily, this was not the case with this book. I literally could not put it down! It has you feeling excited, anxious, frustrated, and extremely hot and bothered...

Jack and Sara are two highly passionate, motivated and independent individuals, who discover this completely explosive chemistry between them. For most of the book, Jack acts like a typical philanderer, who is extremely talented in seducing women. You feel acute frustration at his seeming inability to commit or admit to himself that he has deep feelings for Sara. Sara, on the other hand, has realised she harbours deep feelings for Jack but is afraid of being hurt, so is determined to keep him at a distance.

I thoroughly enjoyed the story-line as I found it to be completely different to your typical romance where the hero - although he may have some flaws to him - is basically portrayed as "perfect". This book was more realistic in the sense that Jack was not depicted as a classic hero at all. There were times you were fuming with his insensitivity or impassivity. Even so, you find yourself falling madly in love with him despite his womanising predilection.

This was a well-written book with extremely steamy sex scenes which left you panting at the end of each chapter. Crowe has an amazing talent for keeping your interest and begging for more. I am very much looking forward to reading the next two books! This is a read that is well worth it!! Undoubtedly refreshing and surprising, and extremely hot!! Loved it!

Floor Time, the first in the Stewart Realtors series came highly recommended. This erotic romance has a lot going for it, it is sexy, has light BDSM, romance, conflict, and a realistic story line. I also really enjoyed seeing the successful business woman as the sub. She isn't broken, she has no major past issues (nor does he, though he thinks he does) and they are both stubborn idiots! LOL

Jack is the Real Estate king of Ann Arbor. Everyone in the Stewart offices looks up to him. He is the consummate charmer and can attract the attention of a room (male and female) instantly. He is also the resident playboy. But Jack has a past. He was a Dom, and was dumped in a bad way by the last person he dominated and has put aside that part of himself. When he connects with Sara, a driven, hard working realtor in another office, sparks fly and Jack feels that Dominant side rear up again. Sara has never been submissive in any way, but Jack opens up a world to her that she knows she is meant for.

Both of them, Jack especially, kept pushing each other away, afraid of their feelings. Sara didn't want to be a notch on his bedpost, and Jack didn't want to be hurt again. But Sara has hot, long haired rocker Craig waiting to swoop on in. Jack plays it so "cool" that you just hate him sometimes, but then he pulls off something romantic and you can't dislike him anymore.

I must admit, I read this on a day filled with distractions. What I'm not sure of is if I was more easily distracted than usual. While I really enjoyed this book, something kept me from connecting completely. Maybe because I prefer first person to truly connect, maybe it's because Jack had a tendency to be a dick--I'm not quite sure what it was. I absolutely want to read more, and I hope that the next books are a continuation.

I get the feeling the love triangle will grow in future books, which I don't think I would like. Sara was a little too much of a tease to Craig, and I hope that doesn't continue. As cute and sweet as he is, I would like to read about him finding happiness with another woman.

The sex scenes were hot but there could have been more, and they could have been fleshed out a little more (fleshed-haha) but I am hoping they both let themselves go more in future books.

Likes:

- Realistic portrayal of a driven woman submitting for the first time
- Peeks into Sara's research on the submissive psyche
- 2 hot men to choose from
- Real estate is a unique backdrop
- Hot BDSM (lite)
- A HFN (Happy For Now)
- That the story will continue

Dislikes:

- Had a little trouble connecting
- Jack was a little too full of himself and a dick sometimes
- Craig was too nice to be lead on so much
- The sex could have been even hotter and there were a few too many fade outs in the end.

Story: 4 Stars

Heat: 4 Hs

This actually felt like an introduction to a series. There is definitely more to read, the next books in the series are rated progressively higher and I, for one, am looking forward to it!
