Arkyne Story of a Vampire: A Celtic tale of horror, myth, and magic Caroline E. Farrell

On the Aran Island of Inis Mor, off the west coast of Ireland, where Caleb Flaherty encounters the beautiful and mysterious French girl, Coco de Rais, he discovers that she has unleashed a daemon; the vampire, Lucius, hell bent on destroying them and all they hold dear. Now, drawn together from vastly different lives and in grave danger, they must accept and utilize the power they have each inherited through their strange and magical lineage.

"A gripping story, combining Celtic magic with horror and adding its own twist to the vampire genre."
Lissa Oliver (Gala Day, Chantilly Downs, Sainte Bastien)

"If you like Anne Rice, this is for you. A great read and beautifully written, incredibly visual."
Niamh Boyce (The Herbalist)

I think people should know how beautiful this story is; when something is worth reading we must spread the news – Arkyne, story of a Vampire was brilliant! I don't read Vampire novels but this one had a unique touch to it, like a sprinkle of magical realism! It was filled with heartfelt characters with distinct yearnings. I could not put it down. Caroline writes in a poetic way – parallel structure, in deep multi-levels. She captivated my mind, bringing her story to life! I was hooked, and intrigued from the very first pages; with her vivid scenes, and colorful details; it all comes to life. I found myself glued to the moment to moment organic sentences! Worth reading! No doubt about it :-)

Caroline's debut novel, 'Arkyne: Story of a Vampire' follows the terrifying and breathtaking journey of a young woman, Coco de Rais, when she unleashes a daemon vampire, Lucius. It asks as many questions as it answers, and leaves the reader wanting more ... and is begging for a sequel, or indeed a series.
