106 pgs. Not having read the earlier books in the series, I'm at a disadvantage in reviewing this. This is a spy series where a nine year old boy is recruited by the GPF (Global Protection Force) to battle the world's most dangerous villains while searching for his missing older brother (who also works for them, but he doesn't know yet). This installment takes place in the arctic when Jack is trying to save some scientists. It gets kind of rough when he's caught in someone's office and gets punched out then drugged. That seems a bit harsh for a children's book. It's all about global warming as a very in your face message throughout. There are lots of cool gadgets that boys will like and a sno-speed machine. I would pass on this one. Not recommended for ES. It is a 5.4 reading level but seems older.

This is the second book of this series that I have read to my 5-year-old son. (We read it out of order.) He is just learning to read and seemed to enjoy the book. However, I know he doesn't fully understand everything that happened. Plus, it took us quite a while to read it and I'm sure he forgot most of the beginning.

I enjoyed reading the first book in this series to him, but this one was very preachy to me. It's about a more serious topic than a younger child would really know about. Global warming? Ugh. The first book was fun and light, but this one was just a little over the top pushing an agenda.

Reading the second book in the series now with him and hoping it's more like the first.

Five stars, amazing book!

Lots of description and I was able to find lots of action in the story, very amazing! Not too scary, not too easy.
