belle jane says

these are getting better and better! the story about chitoge making yummy food for raku with her love was so cute ?

Gavin Abdollahi says

Still hasn't exited it's filler stage, but is still enjoyable. Won't knock down a star, but won't be giving it another one, either.

Kelsey says

3.5

DonutKnow says

Awww Migisuke ? I ship him with him with Honda ?

Gah! Haru too?! Is there going to be any love triangles with the girls? Is there no other boy coming into the story???

Also, another great ship = Shu + Ruri ?

Seobin Baeg says

The author is making numerous excuses to allow Raku to see/have a moment with girls- numeous, each different girls. The art's okay and the story normal but seriously- no boy can have THIS amount of encounters in one day!!!

Haru discovers the truth by accident about Chitose and Ichigo changing how she has always thought of the man of a thousand girlfriends (technically only a few crushes and one pretend girlfriend but who is counting?) Lost at the festival after being found by Ichigo they both get to know one another better as they seek out the others in the cell phone dead zone. Now determined that Ichigo and her sister can be an actual item Haru is going into matchmaker mode to help her overly shy sister get the man she cares for but the question remains will Haru be able to push aside her own budding emotion for Ichigo?

To be honest seeing another Tsugumi drug story didn't really appeal to me even if Paula is the victim this time. They even point out some of the strange thing Tsugumi has gotten in trouble with because she used a device from her organization or ate some strange substance but this chapter is about Paula's follies (or is it?) No wait Tsugumi takes the drugged gummies away from Paula after she took one and proceeds to accidentally giving the love inducing snack to various characters in the story. So yeah Tsugumi is the butt of the jokes once more.

Migisuke (commander of the 1st division police riot squad) is in love and begs Marika for advise. Although she does not care about his love life she decides to "help" him and take the opportunity to get a little time with Ichigo in the meanwhile. Poor Migisuke is just not lucky in love. :)

Ruri's great-grandfather is 100 years old and wishes to see Ruri with a boyfriend before he passes on. He is a bit of a joker and dotes on his precious grand-daughter like mad but this chapter was still touching as she has to decide on taking a chance of making him sad because Ichigo is only being borrowed as a pretend boyfriend or if she should tell him the truth now that she knows his condition is worse then he is letting on.

We also get a chapter about Chitose's less then appealing cooking (maybe Marika is the only real cooking type here) as she completes to create lunch boxes for Ichigo and another bonus manga at the end of Magical Confectioner Kosaki so please take a moment to enjoy this zany series. :)

My favorite moment would have to Marika's 4th wall break as she introduces Migisuke as he dog and his real rank pops up next to him in the same scene. Marika is very over the top which might be why she made #2 on the popularity polls for Nisekoi but the way she treats poor Migisuki is both funny and tragic at the same time. :)

Bery says

Es una serie historias de los di tintos personajes, principalmente la hermana de Onodera Ruri y Marika , son historias donde conocemos más sobre estos personajes y sus personalidades, se sale del día al día de la historieta de Chitoge y Raku. Chitoge pasa a ser un personaje secundario en este volumen y nos centra en la historia de los demás.

Buenas historias conociendo más de los personajes solo faltó un poco más de diversión

Demasiado lleno, pero el último capítulo fue muy tierno...

Naailah says

I really liked the arc with Ruri and her grandpa, it was heart-warming. Other than that, this volume had the usual with tsundere Tsugumi and bashful Onedera.

Amanda Setasha Hall says

This volume was super emotional for me - especially the middle part. And the fact that they would turn that into a PRANK really upset me.

“Migisuke: gira voce che toccando il corpo di una donna nubile la si possa mettere incinta... Ichijo: Ma cosa sei uno scolarettino delle elementari.

Questo volume è stato molto leggero con storia che aggiungono nulla alla trama principale, Haru scopre oltre al fatto che Ichijo e Chitoge sono finti fidanzati, che Raku stesso è il suo principe azzurro. Haru dopo aver passato la serata con Raku, per bene della sorella Kosaki, decide di rinunciare al suo amore per Raku. Sarà davvero così? Le storie con protagonista Miyamoto sono davvero belle e hanno anche qualcosa di malinconico, se riesci a scavare a fondo, in questo volume deve presentare il fidanzato a suo nonno che ormai a poco da vivere e prima di morire vuole vedere chi sarà il suo fidanzato. Questo darà spunto a gag e situazione comiche da ridere a crepapelle con un finale di storia che ti lascia un pò l'amaro in bocca, ma è quell'amaro che ti tocca l'anima senza ferire, e qui vediamo Ruri nella sua essenza con varie sfaccettature. Il resto bene o male è sempre lo stesso gioco ad acchiapparella tra i le protagoniste e Raku. Se non fosse per la storia di Ruri, direi che questo volume mi è costato un pò troppo. Per quanto riguarda i disegni dall'inizio del manga sino a adesso non, ho trovato miglioramenti, a parte quelle espressioni molto caricaturali quelle sono fatte bene.

Do un 7.5 al volume complessivamente.

From the end of the last volume, we get an interesting development from Haru. Finding out that Raku and Chitoge are fake dating, her feelings change regarding him. She forces herself to rethink her previous judgments, and realizes that her sister actually has a chance with him now. Of course, her crush on him starts becoming even more apparent, but I do like that she learns to trust what he says because of this. She actually relents to trusting him more now that she understands.

There are a couple comedic chapters after this, where another badly-tested drug is passed around, and one where Marika forces Raku to pretend to be her boyfriend, and one where Chitoge tries cooking something edible for Raku.

But the main plot line is when Ruri is forced to visit her “dying” (or just dying) grandfather, and ends up taking Raku pretending to be her boyfriend, and Shu, with her. This is a development in seeing Ruri in a new light, and I like her, but it’s also a bit sad. It explains her relationship with Shu more, though.

A good volume overall. Will be reading the next one soon.

La historia principal sigue en pausa, El único avance (aunque podría considerarse lo contrario) es que la hermana de Onodera tras descubrir que Raku finge ser novio de Chitoge, deja de verlo como villano, y de hecho se medio enamora de el. El resto son historietillas que son medio chistosas algunas, pero sin realmente haber alguna interesante.

The main story shows no advance. And after Onodera's sister discover he is not really Chitoge's boyfriend she also ends up falling in love for him. Rest are mini stories, but there is none that really jumps as specially interesting.

Elaine says

This was cute and funny...but I really hope that the next volume as more of the main story in it.

Kristine Hansen says

While there was a lot of fluff in this particular volume, two things made it stand out: Haru and Ruri. Both had a chance to really shine and they took it. Haru was finally able to attain some serious character growth, which was a pleasure to see. I love how much she loves her sister. But it's also nice to see her acknowledge her own needs.

The storyline with Ruri could easily have only been a fluff piece, with the whole pervy old man schtick, but it came out better than expected, with some wonderful hint of depth from Maiko, which was nice to see. I think Maiko doesn't get near enough chances to shine.

Overall, this was a nice volume. I even liked the Lunchbox scenario at the end because it added a hint of depth and maybe a smidge of growth to Kirisaki who has really faded into the woodwork at this point. My only complaint? That the main storyline went absolutely nowhere in this volume. I hate how that's dragging out.
