Three novellas of future combat in one volume by the masters of military SF. Each tells the story of a planetary invasion by men on a do-or-die mission.

"An Army of One" by B. V. Larson (a novella in the Star Force series) – One man attempts to stay neutral...and fails. The Macros are invading from the skies. The only nanotized man who isn't officially part of Star Force learns how hard it can be to avoid an interstellar war.

"First Conquest" by David VanDyke (Book #1 of the Stellar Conquest series) – In 2115, EarthFleet sends its best warships and bravest Marines on a one-way trip to conquer an alien star system, to win or die trying.

"Cyborgs!" by Vaughn Heppner (a novella set in the Doom Star series) – The Space Marines are in the Oort Cloud, racing in their insertion pods to the frozen planetoid of Tyche. Alone in the dark, outnumbered and outgunned by the cyborgs waiting for them on the methane-ice surface, the hour of desperation has arrived.

Diane says

The 4 stars is for B V Laron's short story about a character on his Star Force series that I'm a fanatic about.

I couldn't get into the other stories. I had a hard time following along with the tech, the characters, the pacing...

David VanDyke says

Author's review. Of course I think it's great, particularly my long novella/short novel First Conquest, a Plague Wars tie-in that launches a new series called Stellar Conquest.

Book 2 of Stellar Conquest, Desolator, will be coming out in June 2013.

Three military science fiction tales. Each ties in to one of the authors' series.

Might be some people's cup of tea but not mine. I had some issues with the structure, content, etc.

Word of advice to the authors - lay off the thesaurus. For this genre, it is a detractor from the action.
