My Mom read these books to me and my siblings one year. They are the best!

I wasn't a massive fan of this book. I was a little disappointed by the author.

I really enjoyed the first books of the GRANDMA'S ATTIC series by Arleta Richardson when I was younger, so reading this was so sweet! New Faces, New Friends is one of the last books in the series and is about when Mable is all grown up - married and starting her own family. I've only read one of the books when Mable was older (I think), and now that I've read this one, I want to go back and read them all!

Such a great, wholesome series, truly. I believe the stories are about the author's grandmother, which is really neat. They're heartwarming stories of family and faith, with a generous dash of humor. Mable and her friend Sarah Grace sure managed to find trouble wherever they went - even when they were adults and wives!

The GRANDMA'S ATTIC series is definitely one I recommend for young readers and families, and just anyone who enjoys real stories from the "olden days". They're something like THE LITTLE HOUSE OF THE PRAIRIE series. I hope to read more!

This is the ninth book of the series and continues to be a pleasurable re-read for me. Reading these as an adult some-20 years after my last read-through, it became clear that the author has a strong faith. The author was (after some research) a staunch Methodist. Her theological beliefs don't always jive with my own scriptural beliefs, but I don't think that is a hindrance to enjoying these books. The things she does very well is show that Christian people do now always behave with Christ-like actions.

This book deals with the birth of Mabel's and Sarah Jane's first children. It also deals with the realities of her life as a preacher's wife and a growing town. It is not as good as her earlier narrative books, the fifth and sixth in the series, but it is very sweet.

I think this was written for a younger audience so maybe my rating was a little tough. I thought the presentation of the Gospel was not entirely Biblical so I can't give it a higher rating.
