a brilliant book; show cases the literary skill and philosophical depth of the writer. its a collection of essays on different people along with a separate section where writer has drawn parallel between the construction of Minar e Pakistan and the creation of Pakistan- a soulful narration. the pen sketches of different personalities are not only the sketches but a complete profile of the character with the reference of that particular era. language is scholastic decorated with sprinkling of poetry mostly Persian. some how I feel that style of prose featured in this book is influenced by "Ghubaar e Khair" Mr. Masood has shown respect for Mulana Azad style though did not approve of his Politics. the description of personalities is awesome the range of people discussed is immense ;from Ma Jinnah to Chirag Hassan Hasrat and from Sarojni Naidu to Arnold Toynbee. writer is a worker of Pakistan Movement and has clearly shown his emotional attachment with it but his arguments are based on logic and supported by historical references. a must read

It took me almost one month to finish this book since I live in a society where book reading has become obsolete and the reader is considered an antiquated :))

I am speechless after finishing this book...

Cried when I realized Qahat-ur-Rajal

Adored when I read ideology of our country

Emotional when I read about independence activists

Confused when I read the about-face of personalities before and after partition

If any witness can define the struggle of independence, British influence over Indian mindset, post-independence fate of Muslim struggle, hopeless political leadership after the demise of Quaid-e-Azam; I would call him Mukhtar Masood. We have surely gotten an independent state but unfortunately our minds, approach, system and bureaucracy is still a slave of pre-partition mentality. Our nation lost virginity the very first year of its birth.

After all, a very good reading for all those who are in love with Pakistan and its ideology. Awaz-e-Dost
