Just a Dog Michael Gerard Bauer

Sometimes a dog isn't just a dog--sometimes he's the glue that holds a whole family together.

Mr. Mosely is a special dog. Not just because he's so big (he's part Great Dane.) Not just because he's all white (with one black spot under his eye and a heart shaped splotch on his chest.) Not just because he's clumsy, or because of tricks (he only knows one, and it's not very good.) He's special because he seems to know exactly what everyone in Corey's family needs, even when they don't know themselves. This is the story of Mr. Mosely, from his puppyhood to the last time he curls up on the back porch. It's the story of how sometimes a dog isn't "just a dog". Sometimes he's the glue that holds a whole family together.

Sob. Sob. Sobbed my way through the last few chapters. MGB owes me a box of tissues and a nights sleep. Another one of Dans favourites for the year and the best dog book I've read in a long time. This has been a firm favourite at school since it was published late this year. At the launch of this book I was HORRIFIED to learn that MGB's own children did not grow up with a family dog! I was SURE that to have written this well about a dog the author must have a dog curled up on his feet as he wrote every word. Just goes to show that MGB can write. The man can def write!

I recently read an interesting book titled "Just a Dog", written by Michael G. Bauer. The book detailed the life of a dog named Mr. Mosely and his owner Corey. This unique dog story shows how he looks to the way he interacts with his owner and family. He appears to be part Great Dane and part Dalmatian. Mr. Mosely is a big dog mostly white, with a wonky black heart shaped marking on his chest. He also has half of his left ear black and a black tear marking under his right eye. Mr. Mosely has an uncanny ability to anticipate Corey's needs, before he reflects them. Corey depends on Mr. Mosley to be his friend during their time together to get him through the good and the bad.

This fictional animal story was a tear jerker at times, but also had inspirational moments that lifted your spirits. I enjoyed how Corey told the story from his personal journal about life with his dog. Mr. Bauer drew from some of his real life experiences with his dog "Penny". I think 8th graders that like reading this book, might also like "The Art of Racing in the Rain" by Garth Stein because both books show a strong connection between the pet and the owner.

Just A Dog is an amazing story about a dog and his family. Corey is a 10 year old boy who gets a little puppy and named him Mr.Mosley. He was little until he grew out of the puppy stage, Mr.Mosley is half great dane so he's a pretty big dog. He is a very loyal and protective dog for Corey and his family. He's special because he seems to know exactly what everyone in Corey's family needs, even when they don't know themselves. This is the story of Mr. Mosely, from his puppyhood to the last time he curls up on the back porch. It's the story of how sometimes a dog isn't "just a dog". Sometimes he's the glue that holds a whole family together. This book is for dog lovers for sure! It was written for a younger audience. Even though it is written for a younger audience it was still a great book! Was very heart touching and really hit hard. I would for sure give this book a 10/10. If you love to read books about animals and dogs this book is for you. This book really connects with me because I had a dog who was the same way in my family when I was younger. If I could read this book again I would. Definitely recommend it!

This story is called "Just a Dog" by Michael Gerard Bauer, it's talk about a dog and a family's story, it's a funny and warm story.

In the beginning, a dog came to a family, the family some like it, but some dislike and avoid him in, but at end he still stay in this family.

In the middle, he did a big a trouble, so the family are some angry.

In the end, the family apologizes he and readmit.

In this story, I learn use my heart, to know about, another people do for my is or isn't good for me.

Christie Murray says

My 9 year old son is all about dog stories right now so "Just A Dog" was the latest book I read to him. As we began to read the book, it was clear that the author was a child. The writing style consisted of short sentences without a lot of detail. But, kids are also known for being very honest and not having the filters that so many of us adults do, and this was true here. The stories about this boy and his dog ranged from funny to sad. What surprised me was the underlying story of the author's mother and father and their financial and marital issues. As an adult, I found this uncomfortable but it didn't seem to phase my son. The one thing I must warn about it is that this book does not have a happy ending. If the death of a pet is something that could upset your child then avoid this book. I wish I had known this before I began reading. By the time I came to that part of the story though, my son insisted that I continue so I did. The loss of the dog was upsetting to my son but the thing that really bothered him was the discourse in the marriage. My son has talked to me a few times about how the mom and dad fought and how sad this made the author. Overall I enjoyed the book and so did my son, but I would not recommend it to a sensitive child or a child under the age of 12.

this book is great I love it it is so sweet it has so much details it's a great book no it's an amazing book I think everyone should read this book it is really good

Jennifer Chapman says

The dog in this story is much more than just a family pet.

Oh my gosh my heart hurts. A great book for young readers but ideally ones that haven't lost a dog or they're going to be wailing and spewing snot all over into several tissues like I was, a grown woman in her thirties.

No one was ever as happy to see me as Mr. Moesly wise. He always made me feel good. Even if I got into trouble at school or lost something or some kids were being idiots and saying or doing stuff, it didn't make any difference to Moe. He just went nuts every time like I was some kind of hero or a movie star are the most important person in the world. And that's sort of how I felt.

And this is why we have pets, especially dogs. It's why, after losing my dog, I immediately had to seek out a new friend. But this short book (with no pictures, save the cover) is so grand. It takes readers into all the aspects of life touches by a dog: the morning paper, sleeping arrangements, thunderstorms, new babies, marriage squabbles, lost jobs, and life lessons.

Even if I was bawling in the bathroom for a good while over it, this book is worth the read. Our dogs teach us many, many things, and ten year old narrator Corey aptly notes:

Maybe I learned [how to wait] from Mr. Moseley. Maybe it's the one trick he taught me. That sometimes, no matter how much you want something, the very best thing you can do is wait, just like he did wait for stuff to happen or stop happening, for things to heal up and get better or for someone to come home. I reckon that's a pretty good track to learn, from just a dog.

The usual thing to say about books like this is that anyone who has ever loved (and lost) a beloved pet will adore it (and BYO tissues), and that is certainly true of Just a Dog, but it's also selling it a little short if one were to leave it at that. Just a Dog is a beautifully balanced and modulated sequence of stories about Mr Mosely (aka Moe), best-beloved dog of the Ingram family, told by the eldest child, Corey. As Corey relates funny and sad and scary stories about Moe, he also reveals much about the hardships and trials, as well as the joys and loves that come to his family over those dog years. It's a beautiful device, but it only works so well because Moe is such a great dog-character, and Corey rings so deeply true as a child-narrator who doesn't entirely understand everything that's going on in his family, but who does, at the heart of it, understand Family. And it's also just a really lovely book about a great dog and the boy who loved him. And you can never have too many of those.

Jessie says

Ten year old Corey narrates the reader through a series of stories about his dog Mr. Mosley. Mr. Mosley was supposed to be a pure-bred Dalmatian but instead he seems to be part Dalmatian and part Great Dane. As the title suggests, Mr. Moe is more than just a dog for Corey and his family, he is a friend and family member that shares funny moments, sad moments, and tough moments with the family. Mr. Moe knows how to help everyone in the family in their times of need.

Wow does this book take you on an emotional roller coaster! If you are going to be reading this book in a public place, please be aware that I laughed out loud and shed a few tears while reading this book. As an animal lover, and a dog owner, it was so easy to relate to Corey and his stories about Mr. Moe. I loved hearing about Mr. Moe's puppyhood and the trouble he got into. As things start getting tense in Corey's family, Mr. Moe becomes the one constant that helps him get through. This book is sure to touch the hearts of readers young and old!

Annabelle Moses says

It is really good if you like dogs and also if you like sad stories because this one got to me.

Short-listed for The Children's Book Council of Australia awards, Michael Gerard Bauer is an award-winning and best-selling children's fiction author.

This book tells the story of Mister Mosely and the Ingram family.

Whilst discussing some very grown up issues including financial hardship, depression, new siblings, job loss and infidelity, this is purely and simply a book about a boy and his dog. It also touches heavily on how a pet, especially a dog becomes a member of the family, they're there when times are good and bad and they'll show you undying affection even when the world seems to be at its blackest. Most of all though, this is a great children's book. It would be a good book to read with your child if you are thinking about getting a dog because underlying all the stories are bolstered by the principles that every potential pet owner should consider, dogs live for a long time, need to be trained and fed and exercised and loved and are a lifelong commitment.
