Arun Divakar says

This probably was one of the first works I read in Malayalam where the female protagonist took a stance of independence. From an overly protective family and the clutches of a dilly-dallying lover she moves apart and stands with her feet firmly planted on the ground, daring anyone to cross her.

Padmarajan is a favorite of mine in Malayalam literature for his ability to describe nature in all her glory. You can see before your eyes the green paddy fields swaying in the breeze, the flocks of birds that fly like unnotched arrows across the sky, the golden disc that sinks beyond the distant coconut groves. It's a nature lovers delight. There is also the exploration the author does on relationships and the tapestry of emotions woven in a small town's heart.

Master piece from Gandharvan of malayalam.... All emotions embedded in a story with very strong female characters. Such strong and bold characters are rare in literature. Feelings and emotions oscillate constantly in this novel, the character you like a lot in a one page might be the one who hate the most in the other. Circumstances mold character of people.... so no one to be blamed, everyone got their own explanations..... A definite page turner indeed.

Deepu George says

A beautiful novel with very strong female charecters in a way only padmarajan is able to bring out. A simple beautiful novel with out being very preachy touching on the human feelings, it's loneliness and up and downs. Very few novelists can boast of touching the very fine human feelings . A must read especially for those who love Padmarajans works

Shobith says

Padmarajan the legendary writer has handled the sublect in such a precise and classic way. If it was any other writer the the reader will face vulgularity while reading the book.

Athul Raj says

The life of a girl as she matures into a woman, facing the hardships of life is etched beautifully by Padmarajan. All the characters have good depth. A nice read.

Deric says

Padmarjan excellently narrated story of Bold Kalyanikutty ,revengeful Sobha & aimless Prabhu. Every human being may go through these perspectives somewhere in life.
