Sarah Santos says

I hear there's a movie in the works. Not the show itself, but including highlights of the show. I hope this is true. As someone else said, the introduction by Vivian's wife made me almost cry.

Rick Raksjub says

I saw this when I was young and I never forgot it. My copy is precious. I keep it in a drawer with a few other things I never want to see damaged. Vivian Stanshall was a monster talent. He was the kind of Englishman who makes England English. I envy his wife getting to work with him. I should have liked to have met him. Just once.

Robin Loceff says

The introduction by his co-writer and wife made me cry.

McZine says

You've gotta love Viv in order to love the book

Erike Layland says

If I could see any show, any at all, this is the one I'd wish for. (Ki's introduction made me cry. A thing of beauty. I loved this man.)

Lois Amberson says

I'm one of the luck few who saw this show in England. Never saw anything like it and I've always wanted to see it again. How many musical comedy surreal opera there in the world starring parakeets and flounders and bag ladys? At least I have this book to remind me. The intro by Vivian's wife really touched me. I wish she'd write a book about him.

Maurice Jolley says

My bucket list. To go back in time and see this. Or - for it to be staged again.
